

57th Washington Asia Forum

Center for Asian Studies of American University

“China's Security Strategy”

Yan Xuetong
Tsinghua University, China

Tuesday
November 11, 2003

6:30pm

Butler Conference Room

Yan Xuetong is serving as Professor and Director of the Institute of International Studies at Tsinghua University. He is a member of the China-Japan Friendship Committee of the 21st Century and the China Committee of the Council of Security Cooperation of Asia-Pacific (CSCAP). He is a board member of the China Arms Control Association, the China Asia-Pacific Association, the China Association of International Relations Studies, and the China Foundation of International Studies and Academic Exchange. He is also an adjunct professor of the National Defense University, and an author of five books. He received his M.A. and PhD. from University of California at Berkeley.

For further information, contact the Director of the Center for Asian Studies, Professor Quansheng Zhao or Aria Bailey (202-885-1760)